Archaeology on the Ogeechee River

What is Underwater Archaeology?
Archaeologists study the remains of past human activities that are buried or submerged in water. They use a variety of techniques to locate, excavate, and study these sites. This includes underwater archaeology, which is the study of submerged sites and artifacts.

How do Underwater Archaeologists search for sites?
They use a variety of techniques, including sonar, magnetometry, and remote sensing. They also use traditional methods like diving and dredging.

What do we find?
Archaeologists have discovered a wide variety of artifacts, including weapons, tools, and everyday objects. They have also found human remains and structures.
